nanoHUB connects research grade software, data science tools, and data repositories to their end users: domain experts, instructors and students.

Users do not need computational expertise or access to specialized hardware.

End users consume products as easy-to-use online apps and tools or science workflows, often coupling to data science tools. The nanoHUB infrastructure makes all of this happen in a transparent and powerful way.